

ABSTRACT

5

A displayable interactive screen implemented to display the charging status of a capacitor in an implantable medical device. The display includes real time representation of voltage from start to target, tracking of elapsed time, status of charging circuit and a progress bar. The charging system may be terminated by a cancel button which remains active from the start to the end of the charging cycle. The displayable screen is a programmer or a PC in data communication with the programmer.

P- 9366.00